

Swedish Medical Center Clinical Diabetes Educator- Swedish Diabetes Education Center

One place lets you be the nurse you always wanted to be.

Ask the nurses of Swedish what it's like to work here, and their eyes light up. They say this is a different kind of place, where you can deliver the quality of care you always imagined. Here, you have mentors in your fellow nurses and physicians, you work on a variety of cases, and you're part of a 100-year legacy of caring for the people of the Northwest. At Swedish, there are no limits to what you can do—or dream.

The Clinical Educator participates in the assessment, planning, implementation and evaluation of the diabetes education program at the Swedish Diabetes Education Center. The Clinical Educator in this position educates patients about diabetes self-management in individual or group settings, assesses patients self-care needs and his/her ability to manage diabetes and plans and conducts continuing education programs in diabetes for allied professionals and the general public.

Within each role, the Clinical Educator functions as a resource nurse to the patient and other health care professionals both within and outside the Swedish Diabetes Education Center.

The successful candidate will hold a Bachelor of Science in Nursing, certification as a Diabetes Educator and possesses an RN license from a National League for Nursing-accredited school of Nursing in the State of Washington. This position requires four years of experience as an RN and one year of relevant Nursing experience in community health or ambulatory care.
